COVER STORY 2 - MRS. POOJA CHOUDARY

POOJA CHOUDARY narrates her story, straight from the heart

Dear Friends and esteemed Gurus,

As I stand here today, bathed in the warm glow of nostalgia, I am transported back 25 years to my time at this very institution.

Memories flood my mind the stern yet caring Principal, Late Mr. Shivdasani, and his elegant wife, Dr. Mrs. Shivdasani, who resided in the same building. The Vice Principal, our dedicated teachers, and my fellow classmates all of them etched in the tapestry of my past. Many of us have gone on to achieve success in diverse fields, and I am fortunate to still be in touch with some of these remarkable individuals. When I graduated in the year 20XX, my parents had divergent aspirations for my future.

My father envisioned me pursuing engineering, while my mother hoped I would choose medicine. However, destiny had other plans. With a strong conviction, I opted for architecture, disappointing my parents momentarily. Joining Rachna Sansad, I found my passion and confidence in this creative field when my design entry in an all-India architectural students' contest garnered the coveted first prize. That moment of recognition infused me with confidence a belief that my chosen profession was not just a career but a calling.

Later, as an in-house architect at Reliance, I had the privilege of contributing to the construction of the Dhirubhai Ambani International School with Mrs. Ambani. Mrs. Nita Ambani's kind words of appreciation further fuelled my determination. My journey began in the hallowed halls of architectural academia, where I honed my skills and nurtured my love for design. But life has a way of surprising us. Marriage beckoned, and I found myself relocating to Hong Kong to join my husband.

Little did I know that destiny had other plans and would lead me from drafting tables to luxury automobiles. Allow me to share with you a story of passion, resilience, and the unexpected twists that life often throws our way.

My husband, an engineering graduate and a financial wizard at Lehman Brothers, harboured an unbridled love for luxury cars. His father, a retired army officer, had a successful Maruti and Swaraj Mazda dealership in Hyderabad. Together, we embarked on an entrepreneurial adventure one that would take us far beyond architectural drawings.

Our dream? To venture into the uncharted territory of luxury automobiles. We set our sights on securing a BMW dealership a bold move considering an existing dealer had dominated the market for decades. When we shared our vision with seasoned professionals, their scepticism echoed: "How many Indians would buy a BMW (Speak in HINDI)?" (Undeterred, we persevered.) We went against stiff competition, we clinched our first BMW dealership.

The road was rocky, the environment challenging, but we dared to dream. In 2005, with determination and a workshop in Chembur, we launched our business. Our sales team operated from that humble space, burning the midnight oil, fuelled by shared aspirations. And so, from drafting tables to luxury showrooms, our enterprise Bavarian Wheels was born. Our journey taught us that passion knows no boundaries, and dreams, when nurtured, can defy convention.

Amidst the accolades and tireless efforts, we never lost sight of what truly matters: family. In 2006, our lives were forever changed when we welcomed our first child, Dev. The journey was a delicate balance between the demands of entrepreneurship and the joys of motherhood. I often found myself questioning: "Can't I be there more often for my children? Don't they deserve more of my time, affection, and attention?" The weight of this guilt would sometimes consume me. Yet, somehow, we managed. And in 2010, our family expanded once again as we joyfully welcomed our daughter, Shloka.

These two precious souls became my greatest source of inspiration the driving force behind my relentless pursuit of excellence. Their innocent eyes motivated me to push the boundaries of what was possible, and they taught me to lead by example. Through the challenges and triumphs, my children remain my compass, guiding me toward a purposeful life filled with love, dedication, and unwavering commitment.

Several challenges we will face, several risks we must take, for only then several pleasures will we gain. And as years passed constant efforts propelled us to the pinnacle of success. By grace of God we have 9 showrooms and 5 workshops dealing in 7 different luxury brands. It will be of interest to youngsters that we now have brands like BMW, Mini Cooper, Lamborghini, Porsche, Ducati Motorbike in Mumbai and McLaren for all India. We also operate from Pune, Delhi, Indore.

Today, as I stand before you, I invite you to embrace the unexpected. Let your passions collide, and dare to dream beyond the confines of convention.

For it is in those audacious dreams that true innovation thrives.

COLUMN BY LIFE COACH DR FARHANA VOHRA

Dear Special you,

Trust you are well,

I like the mythological story about the Icarus Lesson, it narrates the dangers of not only flying too high but also of not flying too low.

The tale has been usually narrated about not getting heady with power and flying too high; there is another point of view too:

When we fly too low, we settle for less. We are selling ourselves short of our potential. This is due to fear of not having confidence. We have the best experiences when we step out of our comfort zone.

Move out of your comfort zone, and check if you are living to your true potential.

Best Regards

The Icarus lesson,

Mythology stories are exciting and timeless; they are entertaining tales narrated to kids with deeply embedded lessons. These stories live through generations.

I first heard the story of Icarus when I was probably 9-10 years old. It was told to me by my parents and then in a Moral science class. Moral science was a combination of discipline, instilling values, and teaching how to be virtuous citizens. The narrative engaged with a few short stories and examples of good behavior. Society would be a better place if we had classes on being better versions of ourselves as society is as good as its citizens. And we are a product of what we learn, imbibe, and follow.

The Icarus phenomenon is one such story, Icarus was the son of Daedalus, an accomplished inventor who designed a complex labyrinth on the island of Crete for Minos, the King of Crete.

Sometime after building it, Daedalus fell into disfavor with the king of Crete and was condemned to live the rest of his life inside the labyrinth. Even Daedalus could not find a way out of his maze. He and his son were trapped forever. Being a brilliant inventor, Daedalus designed wings of feathers and wax to escape. In theory, the wings would allow Daedalus and Icarus to fly above the labyrinth and off the island to freedom.

The father knew the dangers of flying too high as the wax would melt with the sun's rays; he warned his son. "Son, do not fly too high as the sun's rays will melt the wax."

Most of us remember the warning of not flying too high, and the other line is forgotten "Son, do not fly too low as the ocean's waves will make the feathers wet."

The youth rarely heed the warning of the older generation, overlooking the wisdom of their years. In his zest for flying and the heady power of rising high above the waters escaping the labyrinth, the son, an adolescent boy, struggled with the advice and soared higher and higher, ignoring the father's screams. Alas, he flew too high; as a result, the wax started to melt in a few moments, and he plummeted to his death. The father looked down into the ocean, and a few feathers were floating on the surface.

This myth is relevant to the youth, which can be heady with power and overlooks its dangers.

We tend to narrate this tale with only the warning of not flying too high, without the other part, of not flying too low too. When we play too safe, we do not soar to our potential; if we look back to the best discoveries, they were by those who broke the archetype, challenged their peers, and believed in themselves.

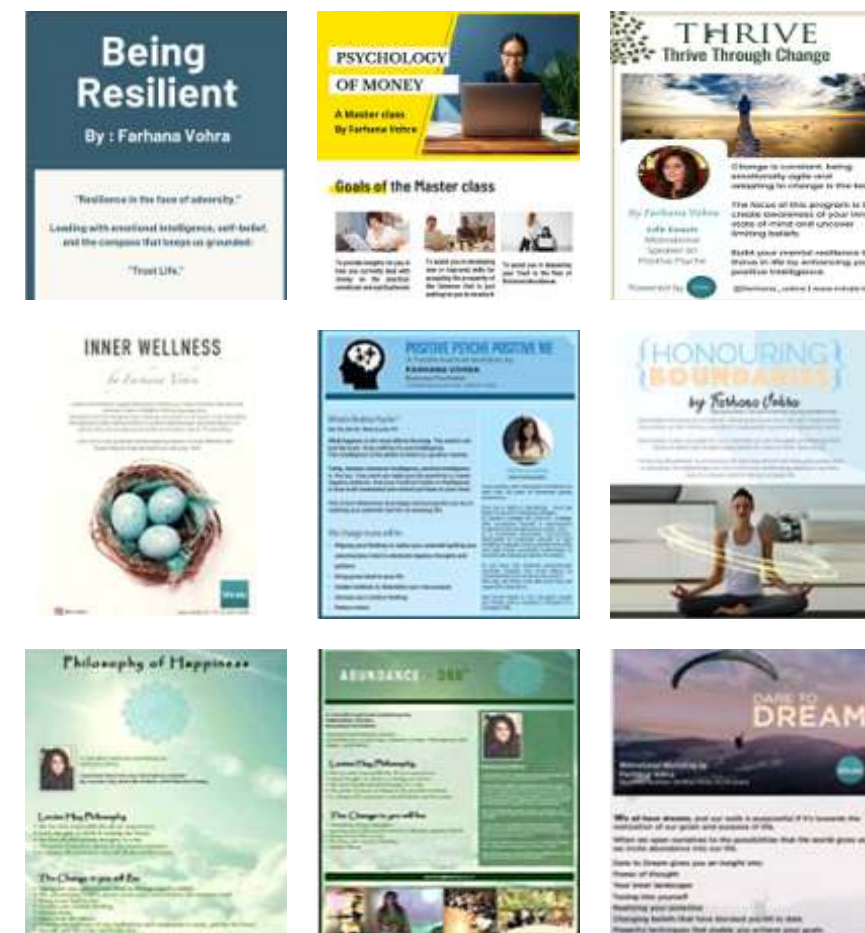

Here lies the exciting difference, flying too low and playing too safe is also dangerous. It is the balance that makes us succeed in life.

We need to remember both.

VINAY AMESUR

5 years in college from 1985 to 1990 were the best times of my life. As the secretary of the Sindhi circle for the entire duration as well, this gave me the opportunity to not only direct but also act in multiple plays & dramas. I also had the chance to organise events for the gymkhana, hobby centre and various associations of the prestigious college. Every single moment led me to be prepared for the challenges that lay ahead and played a massive role in me being the proprietor of Tulsidas & Vacco group, a Govt Recognised Star Export House; manufacturing, exporting and importing dry fruits, spices and herbs & herbal products.

1) What is your fondest memory of the College?

The very first day Stepping into JAIHIND College was like stepping into a whole new world, I was excited about everything that awaited and was in store for me. Even today when I close my eyes I remember the first time I entered the room to attend Sindhi circle meeting. Within a few weeks I was appointed as the Secretary of Sindhi Circle and was given a huge responsibility of Organising the Intercollegiate Sindhi Drama Competition in which the top 5-6 Colleges from all over Mumbai & Ulhasnagar took part.

There are many fond memories of College which I cherish even today: Acting in several plays, Dramas, monoacts and their rehearsals all over the college,

2) Your favourite hangout spot in College?

Green Room, auditorium which were and still are my favorite hangout places, the feeling of nostalgia is strong even today when I enter the institute. Devouring delicious dishes in College canteen with the best of friends who are even today an important part of my life. I met my life partner Varsha Nitsure, nee Pranati in Jai Hind college with whom I share a beautiful life along with our 2 children. In College, I was close to not only my friends but also most of the professors as most of the time was spent in Professors Common room discussing various activities.

3) Your favourite Professor?

There were many great teachers and professors during my time like Ma'm Suri, Ma'm Surti, Sikka Ma'm, Professor Ramchandani, Gope Rupchandani Sir, Baldev Matlani Sir whose high funda Sindhi I am still trying to emulate to this day. My favorite teacher who has left an ever lasting impression on my life was no doubt Professor, Principal, Friend, Philosopher and Guide Shivy Sir who never taught me any subject in college but taught me how to live Life with a Smile. Always encouraging, trusting in our abilities and giving us the motivation whenever we were overwhelmed or felt less confident, allowing us to take on any challenge. We did our best to never let him down. It was to him and Kajal Ramchandani who Co- Opted me as a Committee Member of Sindhi Circle and the Credit of taking me into Alumni Committee goes to the best and ever smiling Jyoti Thakur Ma'm. I was very happy and it felt like a dream come true when the Sindhi Circle and Jai Hind College announced Shivy Awards for the best male & female student . I was chosen and given the opportunity to be the Chief Sponsor for the same and I promise to do so every year till I am alive.

4) Your advice / message to the current students?

For me Jai Hind College was and still is a Temple of Knowledge, it's mantra 'I Will & I Can' will never lead you astray as long as you put your heart and utmost effort into everything you set out to achieve. I would like to give a small message to students all over the world that: if and when they get a chance to be a part of Jai Hind college in any capacity they must know that Lady Luck & fortune is smiling upon them just as it did with me. Today whatever I am, whoever I am, my family my Love I owe it all to JAI HIND COLLEGE.
